

RUNAH

"I have come to this planet to witness the Humans destroy all life on Earth."

Welcome to the world of RUNAH's latest single 'Entropy'...

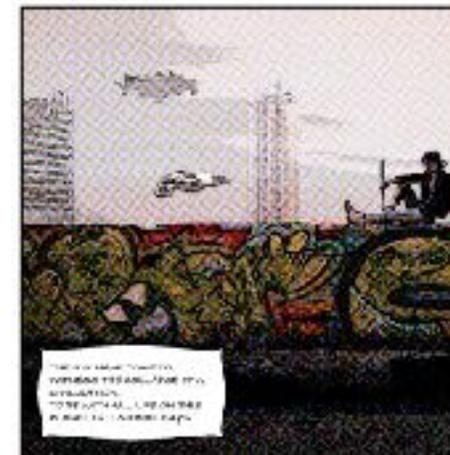

Partially created before Ireland's lockdown and partially created after, the video is influenced by comic books. Directed and edited by Robert Montgomery and produced by Picture Mode.

In order to tell the story of Entropy RUNAH created a comic book to go with the video. The story follows strange twists and echoes of RUNAH's life long fascination with the human experience and the deep heart break of our effect on the planet we call home.

'We wanted to tell a story that echoes much of the human experience at this time' states Runah.

Entropy, the song, is relentless. We created the soundscape so that it kept moving relentlessly in the same direction, a gradual journey to decay.

"Entropy is a smoky and disorientating trip hop inspired offering, seeing RUNAH soundtrack her own undoing and loss of control alongside spiralling, repetitive and sophisticated, looped production." When The Horn Blows.

In February RUNAH released indie dance single Same Face which was play-listed in New Music Friday UK along with the likes of Billie Eilish and Sam Smith. It was also selected for the Breath of Fresh Eire and Hands in the Eire editorial playlists, the latter of which used RUNAH's image for the playlist cover!

Same Face was praised by critics and fans alike: "Electronic-folk artist Runah doesn't shy away from a balancing act in the fantastical world she's created" Hotpress.

In 2019 RUNAH released her debut album STRANGE, which has earned over 600,000 streams in just a few months, and selected for a number of high profile Spotify Editorial Playlists. Having wowed audiences at Ireland Music Week, London's infamous Groucho club, Manchester SoFar Session to name a few, garnered praise from the likes of HotPress, Earmilk, Clash Magazine and Bittersweet Symphonies, and enjoyed national and international radio play on RTE, KCRL, Near FM, DCFM and more, RUNAH is quickly cementing her place among the most exciting and uniquely appealing artists working in music today.

RUNAH is signed to Beardfire Music, the indie label behind Patricia Lalor (now with Warner Music Group), KTG and Martin McDonnell, run by veteran producer and songwriter David Virgin (SPK, Sekret Sekret, toured with Cat Power, Nick Cave, INXS), and his sons Rohan Healy and Al Quiff.

RUNAH also recently signed a publishing deal with Max Music Publishing who have an enviable track record of 100s of international syncs including placements in FIFA, Greys Anatomy, Fast & Furious and Grand Theft Auto to name a few.

"...an artistic statement that looks set to cement her status as one of the most eclectic and interesting musicians working today." Bitter Sweet Symphonies on Entropy.
